

Courses for Visiting Students at Pembroke

The emphasis in Oxford is to study one subject or a specific combination of subjects in depth. This may differ from your current University, which tend to allow greater flexibility in choice from a broad range of courses. Pembroke offers the courses listed below to both undergraduates and visiting students. You are expected to select one course from the list. An outline of each course is available in the undergraduate prospectus on the Oxford university web site:

http://www.ox.ac.uk/admissions/undergraduate_courses/courses/index.html

Biochemistry
Biological Sciences
Chemistry
Economics and Management
Engineering Science
English Language and Literature
English and Modern Languages (French, Italian)
European and Middle Eastern Languages (Arabic and French or Italian)
History
History and Economics
History and English
History and Modern Languages (French or Italian)
History and Politics
Law (Jurisprudence)
Mathematics
Mathematics and Philosophy
Modern Languages (French, Italian)
Music
Oriental Studies (Arabic, Islamic Studies, Japanese, Chinese)
Philosophy, Politics, and Economics
Philosophy and Modern Languages (French or Italian)
Philosophy and Theology
Physics
Physics and Philosophy
Psychology (Experimental)
Psychology and Philosophy
Theology and Religion
Theology and Oriental Studies

Within the College you will be looked after by the Tutors in the subject you have chosen who will provide some of your tutorials or arrange tutorials with specialists in other fields as appropriate. Once you have chosen your course you wish to study, you should contact your subject tutor to discuss which options within the course you might wish to concentrate on.

Details of the fellows and tutors in Pembroke can be found by following the links on the Pembroke College web site. <http://www.pmb.ox.ac.uk/Students/Admissions/Courses/>

These pages also have links to the course websites although some material can only be viewed within Oxford.